

Paradise Lost

An overcast evening with a cool breeze is typically an ideal condition for a cricket match in the subcontinent. Spandan and Anish (a representation of 40% of the We Five) made it to a full-house (attendance of 60,442) at the Eden Gardens Cricket Stadium in Kolkata to witness and try to impact the outcome of the Indian Premier League Match between Kolkata Knight Riders (KKR) and Chennai Super Kings (CSK).

Lining up for entry, they were greeted by roars of CSK and Dhoni by the local fans, strange right? This is NOT the Chepauk Stadium in Chennai but our very own Eden Gardens in Kolkata. KKR's skipper Nitish Rana chose to bowl first which backfired after 3 overs itself. The stadium, filled with traitors, were ecstatic with every CSK success and were upset at any moment going in KKR's favour.

The Sunday crowd had come in numbers to witness the Man, the Myth, the Legend - Mahindra Singh Dhoni (MSD). They even went to the extent of urging the other CSK batsmen to lose their wicket, just to watch Dhoni bat. When Dhoni walked in, people lit their phone torches and gave in a huge roar. Chennai posted 235 in their 20 overs, which as usual, proved way too much for the Knights who lost by 49 runs at the end.

The We Five too fell short in front of a host of traitors, and it could very well be said that CSK had 'away' advantage rather than KKR having 'home' advantage :) Our expert analysts point down the following points that have led to the downfall of KKR:

1. Bad Management: The coach seemed to have lost his plan of action in the course of the match.
2. How can Kulwant Khejroliya play over Shardul Thakur when the latter has an additional batting skill at his disposal. Khejroliya made no impact anyways.
3. Sending Jason Roy down at Number 4 when he is an opener - the KKR thinktank certainly lost it here in my opinion.

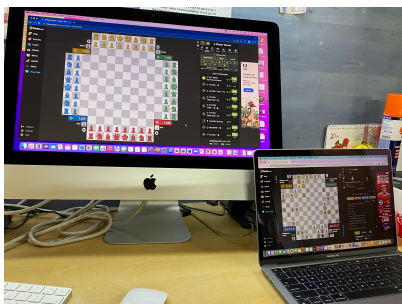

4. Over-dependence on Russell and Narine, the West Indian giants, has backfired as KKR have no solid back-up for them.
5. Pathetic auction strategy: Choosing players whose names we do NOT know. Not even a single Indian player in the KKR team has International reputation or exposure. Certainly speaks ill of those who sit at the auction bench every time.
6. The inexperience of Nitish Rana as a captain has been truly portrayed in the match. KKR is dearly missing Shreyas Iyer.

Based on these points, the We Five demands for the change of the KKR Management and is kindly asking Shah Rukh Khan to please consider changing who goes for the auction (including removal of the CEO Venky Mysore). If he finds no one, he can always remember that we are ready to sit at the auction table for him.

This loss puts us on 8th in the Points Table just above Sunrisers Hyderabad and Delhi Capitals. It would take a miracle to make it to the Playoffs this year, but we are always behind our Knights 💜💛 and sincerely urge for the aforesaid changes.

Soham missed out on making it to the stadium as he had another religious commitment. David and Basil are currently at their respective colleges in Vellore and Delhi which also made them unavailable for the event. It was also learnt that Basil has developed a cold and we all wish him a speedy recovery.

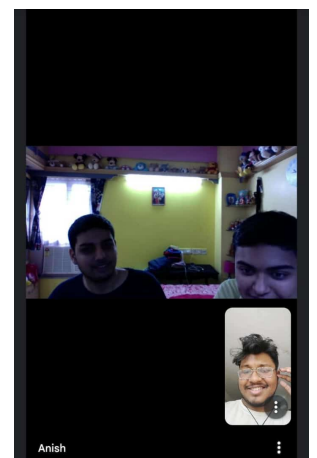

Post the match, the two chess legends spent the night at Anish's dungeon. Later in the morning, they played a Hand Table Tennis Bilateral series (China's tour of Great Britain), where the legendary games ended at a scoreline of 6 - 6. A few chess games and a Video Call (VC) with our Automobile Expert Max Verstappen (David), ended the nice time spent together.

We Five is unique in its togetherness and bonding which grows stronger with every passing day. Recent communication indicated the urge for all members to be with each other and how everyone is dearly missed. I am sure this year has a lot of activity left in store for the We Five Family - the Best Friends Family Forever.
