

Kolkata, May 31, 2026 – As the city settled into a Sunday evening, Anish and Spandan arrived at Acropolis Mall for what was expected to be a simple meet-up and what ultimately became another memorable chapter in a friendship seven years in the making.

Beginning shortly after 6 PM, the evening unfolded over KFC, endless conversations, spontaneous walks through the different floors of the mall, and occasional check-ins on the IPL Final playing in the background.

The cricket was entertaining. The company was better.

What followed was couple of hours of catching up, revisiting old stories, discussing future plans, and adding yet another entry to a collection of memories that already includes school days, Eden Gardens trips, expeditions, sports conversations, Among Us battles, Chess championships, Mini Golf madneses, and countless adventures alongside the legendary We Five group.

The timing of the meet carried its own significance. With Bangalore on the horizon for the author and new chapters approaching for both, the gathering offered a rare opportunity to pause and appreciate just how much had been packed into the previous seven years.

And there was plenty to remember.

There were the trips to Eden Gardens, where victories, defeats, and countless opinions were shared from the stands. There were the many expeditions across Kolkata with the rest of the We Five squad, each outing somehow becoming memorable for reasons that rarely had anything to do with the food itself. There were chats that never slept, inside jokes that refused to die, and enough sports discussions to keep broadcasters employed.

What made Sunday special was not that it marked an ending. It didn't.

Instead, it served as a reminder of something easy to overlook while living through it: the privilege of having a friend who has been present through nearly every important chapter of the last seven years.

The locations of future conversations may change. Schedules may become busier. New experiences, new cities, and new responsibilities will inevitably arrive.

But some traditions appear remarkably difficult to break.

Google Meets will continue. Sports conversations will continue. Auction rivalries will certainly continue.

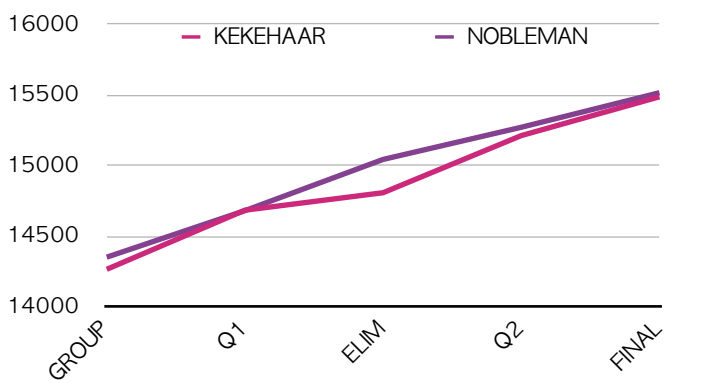

And, most importantly, so will the friendship. Here's to many more!

The Nobleman

SPORTS DESK

AUCTIONROOM PREMIER LEAGUE DELIVERS A CLASSIC

In a dramatic AuctionRoom showdown, The Nobleman AB Team emerged victorious by the narrowest of margins, edging ahead by just 29 points after a contest that remained undecided until the final calculations.

Analysts are already calling it one of the closest finishes in AuctionRoom history.

Historical records, however, contain an important footnote.

A previous trial auction saw the Kekehaar side claim victory by an astonishing 920 points, a result that historians have described as both "embarrassing" and "technically valid."

The rivalry therefore remains alive and well.

FOOTBALL CORNER

Arsenal's contrasting outcomes were discussed.

No further comments have been issued.

COMING SOON

Attention now shifts toward the highly anticipated FIFA World Cup Auction, where fresh glory, fresh controversy, and fresh allegations of suspicious player valuations are expected.

Experts predict close contests.

Experts are probably correct.

EDITORIAL NOTE

The Acropolis Summit of 2026 will not be remembered because of KFC, the IPL Final, or even the auction results.

It will be remembered because it captured something increasingly rare: a friendship that has lasted seven years, survived school life, IPL heartbreaks, impossible auction outcomes, multiple adventures, endless chats, and countless memories across Kolkata.

Some stories are too good to be defined by a single evening.

This was simply another excellent chapter.